NEWSLETTER OF THE UNIVERSITY BAPTIST CHURCH - APRIL 1, 2023 VOL. 60 NO. 4

When I turn on my computer every day, I am always presented with a new screen savor that pops up of some magnificent mountain view, an underwater view of fish or coral or a building of significance.

Today when I started up my computer I had a picture of the Acropolis. Literally translated as 'high city,' the word acropolis means any citadel or complex built on a high hill. But mention the Acropolis and anyone will know you're talking about the remains of important architectural and historic buildings in Athens, Greece.

The caption with the picture said, "It is hard to be humble when you used to be the home of gods and goddess." And that made me think about the tremendous colors, intricacies, and inhabitants of all the humbling scenes that appear on my screen day after day. They too could say it is hard to be humble when this place the habitation by the very God who created it. We forget about this fact when we see and experience a world that does not appear to be filled with God. We see other people as competitors, people less than us, people who are our enemies. We see giant native trees as profit, our rivers, oceans and lakes as our playground to be used as we please even though we are slowly destroying them. We see hate, murder, needless death as an everyday occurrence. But how often do we see it as the dwelling place of God, and the natural wonders and peoples as His?

I mention that because we are nearing Easter, and as I recently reminded you in a sermon, we, the Church, are caretakers of the message of redemption and re-creation. It is our responsibility as stewards of the Good News to tell all who will hear it that even though there are all kinds of injustices, political oppression, hate and dissension, they are all under attack because of Easter. Death, decay, and all that leaves us in despair, is being destroyed because of the good news shared by the women who rushed to the tomb on that first Easter morning. "He is not here, he is risen, just as He said He would."

I wish you all a joyous Easter full of Good News!
